

Teaching Strategies

¹Amonova Onorkhol Chorievna , ²Kholbekov Abdusattor Makhmatov , Rahmonov Nabijon Turakulovich

^{1,2} Teachers of Denov branch of Termez State University

³ student of Denov branch of Termez State University

Abstract. This article, written on the subject of teaching strategies, includes the use of effective teaching and learning strategies. Special attention is given to each type of learning. The subject is widely covered by the author.

Head of the Department of General Linguistics: A.Yunusov

Key words: promoting learners, visual aids, games, technical tools, independent learners, learning strategies.

It is well known that the whole generation of competences of the younger generation depends on the educational strategy in many respects. The requirement of time requires the learner to do a lot of work and research. To do so, a teacher should be able to draw students to the lesson and be highly skilled.

And what is the question of what should be done to attract the teacher to the lesson? In order to attract students to the lesson, classes should be diverse. In each lesson, the use of specific tactics, visual aids, games, and techniques can be a good result. The language learners are bored quickly. Lessons can be a source of interest to technical advancement and to discover new ideas in them, as well as strengthen the memory. It is important to have a science-related game. This will require information about English language. This enhances learning strategies. Students will read more and read more books. Students should have a higher rating than the internet or additional literature. In this way, we will compete in the group. There will certainly be a breakthrough in the competition. In turn, learners should be encouraged. The power of encouragement enhances competition and enhances learning strategies.

The main requirement of the day is to take into account the young psychological features for activating the learning strategy in the learning process.

As practice shows, the different approaches to the language learning process give the repetition of the repetition and the ability to give additional instructions to those who are rapidly absorbing. There are a number of educational and educational goals in the lessons. A teacher can take some exercises to reach them. Image capture has a number of benefits. Language learners who take homogeneous photographs work in one group. In each group, four participants describe English reflected in the picture. Let's assume that in one of the pictures in the classroom, use of interactive methods of learning foreign languages helps to effectively implement the learning strategy.

The lesson "How do you tell me?" Is the vocabulary of language learners who are focused on thinking, translating, and developing their skills on a regular basis. In this exercise, the linguist will periodically split the ball and examine the new words. This exercise will help lessen the fear and the situation. If he can not answer the question, he will go out of the game by telling him something foreign to him.

Studying the learning strategies based on the basics of solving common problems can lead to an effective learning. This, in turn, is the key to good practice.

The biggest problems facing pedagogy

What Do We Learn?

How to read?

How can you achieve effective results while looking for answers? They also seek answers to the questions that make practitioners try to convert their teaching technology into a technological process that results in an inducement to develop teaching.

The birth of this idea creates new teaching technologies. The main reasons for today's use of educational and pedagogical technologies in educational institutions are as follows:

First of all, the wide range of opportunities for personal education, using pedagogical technologies, focuses on the development of the "National Training Program for Cadres".

Second, teaching technologies allow for a broader approach to curriculum activities.

Third, because of the effective use of teaching technologies, it provides opportunities for successful academic achievement.

Studying grammar materials for independent learners is also a good result.
They, in turn, work correctly. It helps to remember the wrong patterns of the verbs and apply them for exercises.

The use of a variety of ROL PLAYERS in the use of foreign language teaching technologies also has an interesting and productive effect.